Law	BA	Law	I	1	Teoria generală a dreptului / General Theory of Law The course starts with defining the right and specifying its character. The appearance and evolution of the law before the presentation of the general principles of the law, precedes its role, functions and purpose. Then the law is presented in the system of social regulations and with the state. The system of law precedes the notion of legal norm. The sources of law, the creation and systematization of law are included in another chapter of this course. The interpretation of the legal norms, the application of the law and the definition of the legal apparatus are presented as basic notions in the study of the law. What should be kept in mind, however, is that this subject is the basis of the study of each branch of law, and the understanding of the pending notions is closely linked to the perception of the notions of all branches of law.	6

Administrative sciences	BA	Public administration	I	1	Teoria generală a statului și dreptului / General Theory of State and Law The course starts with defining the right and specifying its character. The appearance and evolution of the law before the presentation of the general principles of the law, precedes its role, functions and purpose. Then the law is presented in the system of social regulations and with the state. The system of law precedes the notion of legal norm. The sources of law, the creation and systematization of law are included in another chapter of this course. The interpretation of the legal norms, the application of the law and the definition of the legal apparatus are presented as basic notions in the study of the law. What should be kept in mind, however, is that this subject is the basis of the study of each branch of law, and the understanding of the pending notions is closely linked to the perception of the notions of all branches of law.	5
